

I Want a New Prez

(apologies to Huey Lewis & the News)

I want a new prez—
One who won't make me sick;
One who won't build a border wall
Over three feet thick.

I want a new prez—
One who won't hurt my head;
One who can win a few votes
In states that aren't deep red.

One who won't make me nervous,
Wondering what he'll do—
One who won't say "fake news"
When he hears something that's true
He hears something that's true.

I want a new prez—
One who won't tweet;
One who won't make me want to go
And vote with my feet.

I want a new prez—
One who won't get impeached;
One who won't make me lose my lunch
When I hear his speech.

One who won't make me nervous,
Wondering what he'll do—
One who won't say "fake news"
When he hears something that's true
He hears something that's true.

I want a new prez—
One who does what he should;
One who won't make me feel too bad
Because he tries to do some good.

I want a new prez—
One with some self-doubt;
One who won't try to talk too much
Because he hears people out.

One who won't make me nervous,
Wondering what he'll do—
One who won't say "fake news"
When he hears something that's true
He hears something that's true.
